As part of this year’s annual meeting speaker series, we are pleased to present, award-winning leadership expert, Professor Gianpiero Petriglieri. A psychiatrist by training and Associate Professor of Organisational Behaviour at INSEAD, Professor Petriglieri offers unique and helpful insights and advice, even more so in our current context. Drawing on ideas from his clinical background (doctors’ triage strategies, defending against burnout) and his leadership work (crisis leadership as institutional maintenance and renewal) we are excited that he will be sharing his expertise and kicking-off Day 2 of the meeting, on Friday, March 5th.

Biography: How can leaders be trustworthy and foster commitment in the ever-changing 21st century workplace? How can we honor our organization’s history and traditions while working to transform it? How do you nurture a common culture while reaping the benefits of a diverse workforce? These are the challenges Gianpiero Petriglieri’s insights and advice help you tackle.

An award-winning leadership expert and professor at INSEAD, Petriglieri is an insightful and engaging speaker with a unique perspective on what it means, and what it takes, to become and remain a leader. A medical doctor and psychiatrist by training, his research highlights the psychological, social and cultural functions of leadership development, and his teaching methods provide a model of how to perform those functions purposefully for the benefit of individuals, organizations and society at large. Ultimately, his work helps organizations keep the promise of learning and make the most of leadership development investments so people can prepare for the new world of work while cultivating timeless leadership virtues. His keynotes and workshops help leaders better understand how changes in workforce mobility make new ways of leading and learning necessary—and allow them to reconcile commitment with flexibility.
